The Honorable Xavier Becerra
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Representative Becerra,

On behalf of the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations (LCAO), a coalition of 72 national nonprofit organizations concerned with the well-being of America's older population and committed to representing their interests in the policy-making arena, we write to express our strong support for the One Social Security Act.

Combining the Old Age and Survivors (OASI) Trust Fund and the Disability Insurance (DI) Trust Fund into a single fund is a common sense policy that is long overdue. Although the funds are administratively separate, they come from a single source (FICA payroll contributions). Policymakers, experts, and analysts usually treat the two funds as one combined fund, because all parts of Social Security are so intertwined. A single benefit formula generates retirement benefits, survivor benefits and disability benefits, and changes to one part of the system can have significant impacts on the other parts. The annual Trustees Reports provides projections as if the two trust funds were combined (“OASDI”), and these are the projections that are most cited and most useful.

The Disability Insurance Trust Fund was established as a result of the 1956 legislation that established disability insurance benefits within the Social Security system. Because providing actuarial projections for disability insurance was relatively new and uncertain, the funds were administratively separated. However, as far back as 1979, the bipartisan Social Security Advisory Council unanimously recommended a unitary trust fund. Those experts pointed out that requiring legislative reallocations “is cumbersome and can cause needless public worry about the financial integrity of the Social Security system.”

Having two separate trust funds adds unnecessary complexity and can lead to unnecessarily scaring the American people about the strength of the Social Security system. Currently, the combined trust funds have sufficient resources to pay all Social Security benefits in full and on time, through 2033. But because of there are two separate trust funds, the media is already reporting that those receiving Social Security disability benefits will experience a devastating 19% cut in benefits if Congress doesn’t act before the end of 2016. We understand that Congress does not want that to happen, but the media reports are technically accurate, and unduly frightening for those receiving disability benefits and their families. Americans pay into one
Social Security system to protect themselves and their families against loss of income at retirement, death or disability – there is no justification for allowing one type of benefit to be cut due to the administrative separation of the trust funds.

Therefore, the undersigned organizations support combining the two funds, to increase simplicity within the Social Security system and to avoid the artificial crises stirring up needless anxiety that come periodically with the discussions around Congress taking action on reallocation. We applaud you for your legislation, which makes this long overdue improvement.

Sincerely,
